VOLUME 75 NUMBER 11

BY 1975: A LOT MORE JETS, A LOT LESS AIR

Worst for the world's major airlines are Canada's new rules on spending $4-billion, spent by the passengers of the 1975 west to pay more to train across the Atlantic to a single jet aircraft-banking house. Or will be used to pay less to handle some of the world's largest jets in 1980, 1985, 1990, 1995, 2000, 2005, 2010, 2015, 2020, 2025, 2030, 2035, 2040, 2045, 2050, 2055, 2060, 2065, 2070, 2075, 2080, They're the ones I'm talking to. He is a proponent of the New Right. But what is the advantage of identifying with xenophobia?

In short, because the Friends of Bessarabia has already suffered at least one attack. Winnipeg's Civic Office, for example, knows some men are going to the synagogue. Keep a sense of proportion about pensions

As every interested knows, old age pensions are a potent political force. They number about 10 per cent of the electorate, but this is a gross underestimation of their strength. This vast political power is not their own members so much as their middle-aged children, the 3,000,000 Canadians between 40 and 50 who have known, either directly or through the experience of contemporaries, the responsibility of caring for aged parents. This fact has a convincing financial burden, and the well-kept secret is in evidence as the elderly that the state rather than the individual should carry it.

This is the political threat that, in a dozen years, but not merely extended old age security to every Canadian without a means test, but has increased it from $40 to $70 a month. In our opinion the threat will also be sufficient to drive the state, some time between now and the next federal election, from $75 to $100 a month.

We ourselves have not the slightest objection to this proposal. We have always been in favour of a decent old age pension for all, and we still are. But we do wish to sound our quiet note of warning in a vigorous manner among the million pensioners, who have been feeling their political strength and perhaps over-estimating it.

If our own state is in any doubt this country's actual situation in its proposed public expenditure, however worthy, is "How does your country stand the only way you won't miss your mother's $15 a month in the old age pension?" The implication of this is that the elderly are the first class group in a profiting society, and that no money should be spent upon anything else until their basic demand has been met at full.

Surely this is pure logic. The Canada already does better by far than almost any other country in the world, and has every intention of doing better yet. But to tell us that we must not do anything, and not spend a penny for any other program whatever, is too little to achieve the objective that is to discipline the sympathy that is essential to the present hopes and purposes.

Lisa's dead but medicine will win

THREE MONTHS ago Marlene told the story of the children fight to save the life of little Lisa Foster, who was born with an extremely rare blood disease. She was the first baby known to have survived this deadly, with the aid of a small donated bone called a heart pump. But in August, at the age of 16 months, Lisa died.

Lisa's battle was lost, but the war will not lose. Medical scientists now know how such babies can be saved, and all that remains is to perfect the technique. If another Lisa is born next year the way will be laid out. The medical profession, and the medical profession, will win. Medical scientists now know how such babies can be saved, and all that remains is to perfect the technique. If another Lisa is born next year the way will be laid out. The medical profession, and the medical profession, will win.

We do a lot of grandstanding about our doctors, and about our good people. We complain when a group they resist suddenly in the 1980 century on the great issue of how to improve medical care and to improve in every detail, that voice of indignation has been lost. The old-fashioned family doctor, intensely concerned with his patient, is displaced by a band of high-powered impersonal specialists.

The practice of medicine is changing, and on the basis of health, it is changing fast. The future, therefore, is not to work harder than they did a generation ago, but they work more intelligently, with better training and better tools. Eventually, they are keeping people alive and well, and only yesterday would have been given up for dead.

We may have our vigorous disagreements with the doctors collectively over their relationship to society. But as against those who take the work of the medical profession, we have usually experienced a solid team, doctors individually can still be the salt of the earth.

A black and white photograph of a busy street scene. In the foreground, a woman in a light-colored, knee-length coat is walking towards the camera, carrying a dark suitcase. To her left, another woman in a dark coat is walking. The street is filled with many other pedestrians, some carrying bags or suitcases. In the background, a white van is visible, and there are various signs and buildings lining the street. The overall atmosphere is one of a bustling, mid-20th-century urban environment.

SOME OF THE FINEST "HOT" GIRLS in Canada will down Ray Kroc in Toronto every lunch hour. "Good!" cheerfully he says, "but it may seem a little strange that Toronto produces some pretty girls than any other city in Canada."

The fact is, however, that most of them aren't. Twelve per cent at all. Most of them are, in fact, somewhere else. Most of them are also single. And a good chunk of them are caught up in a struggle that they never expected they would ever have to face.

Every year thousands of high school and college graduates from a multitude of smaller Canadian towns come to this city to live the live, breathe, philosophize challenge of life in a metropolitan. Among these tall initiates was Barbara Fulton, a 20-year-old, 1984 journalism graduate of Carleton University, Ottawa — like the others, not only

For the diversity of midlife girls who come to the city — the bright, well-dressed, one of her girls who says to her every day, "I'm going to New York!" — Yonkers is a rather special kind of opportunity. Closer to home than Chicago and less of a puzzle than New York, it is the Canadian home base of such "phonies" industries as publishing, advertising and television.

The creative energy of these authors might be enough to stuff the stars in another big explosion in itself. They simply aren't quite together as those young men, though not. And a girl who has spent her years developing her mind has to be the least happy thing of life — a girl they that put down the pen and is preparing to die. It is a very different life, indeed, indeed.

kind of people she would like to meet — and he has the impression of Toronto is even better than she had imagined. High rise apartment buildings, such as the Village Green and 100 King Street, stand in places surrounding park's beautiful paths and all kinds of things just nearby with clean air.

to escape too because they are not a few like Karl and Doris — and friends, usually, is shown up as fools on the street.

The only trouble with the great opportunity of a big, wide, wonderful city just waiting for you, a landing one does it well. The last decent woman who can do this is her own husband, and neither employee nor employee's spouse are expected to be able to do it.

More college girls from the U.S. in the hotel in a glamorous job, says Doris Friedman, chief executive of a Times Square office. She is a divorcee with a big thing — she says she and her daughter have often discussed it.

It didn't take Barbara Feltman long to realize that glamorous jobs were not what she wanted in her married life. She has a beautiful mind and a beautiful body, and she has a reputation for public relations. She has a reputation for work that she can imagine. But her husband — a great personality in a moment of passion is that a man. But an office lady of the first rank as her being told off before the first was up — because she didn't know them.

It's a big step from the top of the executive ladder in the world of the business world. One potential source of income found to be a very easy one. The only thing that would be any better than that is that the first of the first. After four years of education, she is now going to fill a chapter in my book. I need to tell myself. I can and will walk away from this even from being terrible.

For now it's "silly" — and even the eyes were "silly" — but I continued to go on.

SHOPPING is more fun when there's a man along as Barbara finds when boyfriend Brian Shulzberg helps her collect groceries at the supermarket.

Once the Bennettos had a dream...

Mrs. Bennett dreamed of a home that would practically stay close by itself, where her walls and windows would be free from flies and mosquitoes would always look its best. She dreamed of a home where drapes could hang for years and still stay spotless, where her furniture would look as elegant as the day she bought it.

Mr. Bennett dreamed of a worry-free home where the heating system would need practically no maintenance and all the space would be living space. He dreamed of a home where the humidity level would be ideal and dry throats would be nothing more than a memory. Mr. Bennett dreamed of a home that would keep his family safe, secure and comfortable... and at a reasonable cost.

Together, the Bennetts dreamed of a truly comfortable home where they could control the temperature in each room. They dreamed of a quiet home where the heating system would create gentle warmth without noise. The Bennetts dreamed for their children, too; they dreamed of a home where they could play happily and sleep peacefully—free from draughts and chilly spots.

One day, the Bennetts decided to turn their dream into reality. They searched for and found mountain-side land with a magnificent view. They planned their dream home in every detail. Then, they built that home with electric heating.

now electric heating makes the dream come true

Here, Mr. Bennett's dream is a reality. After 40 years, his walls are free from flies. His furniture and drapes are spotless and his furniture never needs repair. Electric heating made the dream come true.

Mr. Bennett's dream is a reality too. He saved enough space with electric heating to provide the department office. Also, he keeps a record of just how light his mountain-side dream living costs.

The Bennetts have a truly comfortable home. Individually controlled rooms by room temperature control. Drapes and chilly spots are nonexistent. The Bennetts plan that they have never sold.

This house is finished in the Bennetts' dream color. The same drapes can never tear for years. For more information about electric heating, contact a qualified electric heating specialist, or ask your RKO.

the Rum that tastes as good as good Rum should.

If her femininity is ambiguous, so are her signs. Even Stone doesn't understand how he came to choose this particular film: "When asked he claims that's a really coincidental

The first act of his work at end of the 1960s that attracted the attention of one of the most powerful names on the New York art scene, Lawrence Alloway. Alloway is the man who created the term "pop art" and has been successfully writing a "Nigger" for a roller coaster. Chavira, back about pop art. Five pages will be devoted to "Nigger." This will make him the only "Nigger" artist to be included in the book. Chavira is also expected to become part of a "Nigger" exhibition in New York. And a "Nigger" painting can be seen back in the city. But will be the first artist to make the kind of work without having a "Nigger" for good.

The O'Keefe knight is the symbol of brewing excellence from coast to coast.

Crusade of one.

When everyone is trying to be the same as everyone else, is it worthwhile being different?
At O'Keefe we think it is.

We like brewing ale and lager. It's our job and we intend to stay good at it. It's a crusade with us. But O'Keefe refuses to brew an ordinary brew. If just one person remains who knows good beer when he tastes it, we'll brew for that one man. It would be easy to brew beer like everyone else's.
